3. CONTENT

The aim of the course is to examine further the theory and praxis of consecutive interpreting. Since students have already developed their note-taking skills during the previous semester, lessons obtain weekly specific focus topics of greater difficulty and specialization, with more complex meanings and other practical obstacles, so as for the students to practice the management of these situations, as well as the objectivity and adaptability of the professional interpreter. Apart from that, students are informed regarding the ethics of the profession. Last but not least, besides the weekly "focus topic", each student undertakes to present to each lesson a specific topic on current affairs/international affairs/history, so that they can enrich their general knowledge. Teaching is organized according to original material and speeches concerning Greek, European and international affairs.

Week 1: Introduction to professional ethics.

Week 2: The professional interpreter's profile. Ethical dilemmas.

Week 3: Memory, comprehension, processing and rewriting exercises. Preparation and presentation of speeches in front of an audience.
